Drilling Information

All weights of the Jade Tour Quantum can be drilled using the techniques developed for two-piece balls. See Brunswick's "Seven Popular Layouts" for detailed drilling information.

Due to the strength and traction characteristics of the Proactive urethane, even low flaring layouts will provide strong ball reactions. Strong release players can use all layouts, choosing the strength of the drilling to match the desired lane condition. More average players would be advised to stay with layouts 1 - 4 for medium to oily conditions and use the tamer layouts only for the driest conditions.

Due to the even arcing characteristics of Proactive Urethane, BTV advises using early arcing drillings such as the pin down/hole down layouts ONLY when faced with extremely heavy oil patterns.

Polishing and Cleaning

Axiom's textured surface is more resistant to polishing than reactive urethane. The maximum achievable gloss will be lower than reactive urethane. AXIOM Proactive Urethane can be cleaned using the same methods and materials used to clean reactive resin balls.
